

Worth the Visit:

JEREMY GUY, CONTEMPORARY ABSTRACT SCULPTURE

VITAL STATISTICS

Gallery opened: 2008

Size: 240 sq. ft. room in home, separate entrance

14799 Airport Rd., Caledon East
905 584 2134
www.jeremy-guy.com

Good for: contemporary abstract stone sculpture out of black marble & white granite engineered stone

Philosophy: "I aim to create forms which could possibly have been formed naturally or at least enhanced by hand. I believe this creates timeless works of art, promotes a greater appreciation of our natural surroundings and makes for an enhanced personal interaction with the sculptures both physically and contemplatively. I usually use black or white stone as this lets one focus solely on form rather than colour or pattern."

The extra mile: "I can carry out commissioned works based on detailed or loose briefs and provide completed work in much shorter time than a traditional stone sculptor could. I install works and have created special lifting equipment for certain sculptures. I have also created pieces which border on product design, for example screens for hot tubs and display stands, company logos turned into 3D works, water features and even house numbers."

Why it's worth the visit: "I am able to create even large works much faster than many other sculptural processes. All my work is suitable for indoor as well as outdoor display. I can create very large pieces at very competitive prices, the largest piece to date being 12 ft., for display outside a major new hotel in Singapore. So shipping is not a problem."

Sculptor Jeremy Guy enjoys exploring curved shapes in his contemporary abstract sculptures.

This piece, right, by Jeremy Guy, entitled "Orbit" and made of engineered black marble, has been polished to a smooth surface. Touching is encouraged.

Jeremy Guy displays his artistic creations in his home gallery.

PHOTOS BY MIKE DAVIS